

Ex-CIA Official Claims Polish Defector to Be Son of the Last Czar

Ex-Official Challenges CIA to Tell All

Is Defected Spy the Czar's Son?

CPYRGHT

NEW YORK, Jan. 19 (UPI) — A former Central Intelligence Agency official challenged the agency today to disclose evidence that a Polish spy, who defected to the West in 1960 is actually the son of the last Russian Czar.

Herman Kimsey, who was chief of analysis and research for CIA and more recently was assistant chief of security for the Republican National Committee, said the agency has made exhaustive tests to establish the true identity of Col. Michael Goleniewski.

He said he is convinced the tests proved the mysterious Pole is Grand Duke Alexei, only son of Czar Nicholas II.

COURT FIGHT

Col. Goleniewski said he plans to press his claims in American courts any may attempt to force

CIA sources to surrender information in their possession if it is not made public voluntarily.

Czarevich Alexei was reported by a White Russian commission to have died with his father, mother and four sisters in a July 18, 1918 Bolshevik massacre, on the basis of fragmentary bones found in a pit in Ekaterinburg, Russia, a few weeks later.

But rumors have persisted that the entire family survived and there has been no definitive proof to the contrary.

Mr. Kimsey broke the veil of official secrecy concerning the background of Col. Goleniewski, a high Polish secret service officer who defected 19 days after he declared himself the true Czarevich and heir to a $400 million fortune deposited by the Czar in western banks more than 50 years ago.
